Saturday, September 30, 2008 my son's first soccer game. he played really really well and learned a lot! he even kicked off the ball more times than any of the other kids! a few times, though, he was so excited he kicked the ball so hard that it went flying into a corner and he had to chase after it. these pictures are of the parents. he's on the left and his dad is sitting next to him. it was really fun to watch him play. so much excitement for all of us. and, of course, the parents.[Factors associated with childhood obesity]. Obesity is one of the most important public health problems in Spain, as well as in many other countries. Childhood obesity is a growing problem, and recent studies have identified risk factors associated with it. The objective of this study was to determine the factors associated with obesity in a sample of children from Barcelona (Spain). A transversal study was conducted using a multistage sampling design and data were obtained from a sample of 872 children (aged 8-11 years) attending primary schools. Weight and height were measured, and the body mass index (BMI) was calculated. A multiple logistic regression analysis was conducted to assess the factors associated with being overweight (BMI = 25-30), obese (BMI > 30) and very obese (BMI > 35). The percentage of overweight and obese children was 37.4% and 20.3%, respectively, with boys being more overweight and obese than girls. The factors associated with being overweight (ORa: 2.29; 95% CI: 1.45-3.62) or obese (ORa: 3.09; 95% CI: 1.91-4.98) were, respectively, a high birth weight (> 4.0 kg), low age (older than 10 years), the presence of parents with a low education level (basic education or lower) or parents of a professional occupation, the existence of siblings and the number of hours of television per day. The factors associated with being very obese (ORa: 2.74; 95% CI: 1.48-5.06) were the presence of siblings and the number of hours of television per day. In Spain, there is a high prevalence of obesity in children. In
