Simply drag the preview box around your picture to determine the best size for it. Just remember to use the same units you'd use for the width and height. In this example, a portrait picture is about two inches wide and five inches tall. 6. In the Background Color box, choose White. When you're done, click OK. You see a preview of the image in a new open window (Figure 10-8). At this point, you can make minor adjustments to the background color (white here) of the newly created file by resizing the preview box to a size that's similar to the size you'd like to save the file for. A turn-on luminescence probe for highly selective and sensitive analysis of cadmium ion in aqueous media. A fluorometric turn-on probe based on the reaction between ammonium ion and cadmium ion was developed for the determination of Cd(2+) in aqueous media. This probe was based on the combination between a chitosan-modified gold nanoparticles (AuNPs) and 4-(4-carboxymethoxyphenylazo)phenylboronic acid (CLTAAB) to form the CLTAAB/AuNP probe. The luminescence of the CLTAAB/AuNP probe can be quenched by Cd(2+), and thus shows excellent selectivity. Upon the addition of ammonium ion, the chitosan-modified AuNPs would combine with ammonium ions to form Cd(2+)-gated CLTAAB/AuNP probe. Thus, we can realize the detection of Cd(2+) in aqueous media, which is attributed to the fluorescence turn-on process. The CLTAAB/AuNP probe can be used to detect Cd(2+) at concentrations as low as 0.06 μM with a detection limit of 0.03 μM . Oil billionaire is bringing $3M movie set to southern Oregon's Rogue River-Siskiyou National Forest PORTLAND, Ore. — A multi-million dollar movie set is coming to the Rogue River-Siskiyou National Forest and is expected to bring thousands of jobs to the region. "It's a very big project," says Dennis Smith, Rogue River-Siskiyou National Forest deputy chief of resource protection. "The amount of money, just looking at the numbers, is estimated at $3 million to build and operate the production site. This is something we hadn't anticipated back when we started planning our 2020 forest fire suppression activities." The plan to use the forest, in Southern Oregon, as a movie production site is the brainchild of Paul Whitehouse, the founder of Invictus Productions. "I've been looking for a movie set to shoot in Oregon," Whitehouse says. "I had a lead actor in mind, and I found a forest I thought would be perfect. I brought my crew from Southern California and we started to plan." The movie being produced is called "High Road to Heaven" — it's a Western starring Christian Bale. Whitehouse says filming will take place from February to May. In addition to filming, Smith says the movie set will include over 130 crew members and a big rig. "This has the potential to be more employment than any single fire suppression project we've done," Smith says. The Portland-based team will first build a crew house, an office and portable showers, and then move on to the task of fighting fires that have threatened the forest in recent years. "We're going to be doing a lot of our fire suppression work in the summer," Smith says. Invictus Productions has already applied for a state film tax credit. The production will create about 130 jobs, Smith says. "We're trying to create as many jobs as possible," Whitehouse says
