Preoperative Detection of Severe Liver Damage with Gadoxetate Disodium-Enhanced Magnetic Resonance Imaging: A Prospective, Single-Center Study. To investigate the diagnostic potential of gadoxetate disodium-enhanced magnetic resonance (MR) imaging for the detection of severe liver damage in patients with chronic liver disease. This prospective observational study was approved by the institutional review board and informed consent was waived. Sixty-five consecutive patients with chronic liver disease (37 men, 18 women; mean age, 56 years; age range, 19-86 years) were enrolled. All patients underwent gadoxetate disodium-enhanced MR imaging and nonenhanced MR imaging for the estimation of the liver fibrosis stage and assessment of the presence of significant necroinflammatory activity or severe liver steatosis. Differences in the liver fibrosis stage, inflammatory activity, and the prevalence of severe liver steatosis were compared between the presence and absence of each type of liver damage. Significant liver damage was defined as mild or severe hepatic fibrosis or necroinflammatory activity. The sensitivity and specificity of gadoxetate disodium-enhanced MR imaging for the detection of fibrosis, necroinflammatory activity, and severe liver steatosis were 100% (29/29), 95% (30/32), 100% (22/22),
