The free Gimp is a simple and powerful alternative to Photoshop that is available on Windows and GNU/Linux. Photo-editing Programs Available In addition to Photoshop, there are many other image-editing programs that you can use to refine your photos. Some are free, and some cost money. Here is a list of the software programs available:

- Adobe Photoshop Elements is a good, affordable program with extensive features, including undo support and a choice of several features for editing. It allows you to make adjustments to almost any part of the image, and it can also be used for special effects. You can also make bookmarks and create layers. The interface is fairly simple but powerful enough to satisfy the needs of most beginning photographers. It's available in a $99 version that requires a serial number and a $199 version that doesn't have a serial number. You can also get a free trial version of Adobe Photoshop Elements.
- Microsoft's Expression Media Studio is an advanced photo-editing program that contains numerous advanced editing features. Many features of Expression Media Studio are like those found in Adobe Photoshop Elements. The cost for the program is $249, and it has a serial number. For more information about Expression Media Studio, visit www.adobe.com/products/elements-suite.html.
- Snapfish creates pictures that are similar to those you can get from a camera when you upload your pictures to the website, and they allow you to perform basic editing. There is a free version of Snapfish with no editing features. There is a $24.95 per month fee for a premium version of Snapfish that allows you to upload your photos to your site or to a selected FTP site, use image corrections such as straighten, resize, rotate, enhance, de-saturate, and manipulate the brightness and contrast of the image. You can perform some basic editing, such as changing the image size, changing the canvas (the overall size of the photo) and the cropping, with the $24.95 per month subscription.
- PaintShop Pro is a program created by Corel. It is a fully featured photo-editing program, and it is very expensive. However, PaintShop Pro offers the features of Photoshop, plus a much more powerful user interface. Plus, you can find online tutorials on how to use it. Although not as friendly as Photoshop, PaintShop Pro has many features like those found in Photoshop Elements. The cost for Article content continued But he's not doing it out of the goodness of his heart. If the Liberals don't adopt the Green Shift, MacKay warns, they'll be forced to put up tax rates for all Canadians, increasing the deficit by $40 billion, just as the Liberals were planning. "We can't keep telling Canadians that it's all one party's fault — that it is both parties' fault," says MacKay. "There's a real opportunity here to lead on this, and if we don't we will be raising taxes to those who pay the lowest taxes in the country." MacKay said he believes that the Greens are showing leadership on reducing the deficit. "I know our approach to it is different," he said. So is MacKay's. For the Conservatives, the easiest way to shave $40 billion off the deficit would be to repeal the government's controversial income-splitting tax policy. An NDP government would be an easier target, with a deficit of $60 billion. "They'd have to raise gas taxes, and they'd have to raise taxes on the wealthy," MacKay said. The Greens would be a harder pill to swallow. The party would have to shift to a balanced budget within four years, so any tax increases would have to be steep. MacKay is confident that the deficit question would be posed to the Greens after the election, so they'd be on the hook for a guaranteed $40 billion. That's on top of the Liberal commitment to balance the books by 2015 — if all else fails, the Liberals can increase the GST, he argues. # This file is part of BlackArch Linux ( ). # See COPYING for license details. pkgname=volmove pkgver=1.5 pkgrel=2 pkgdesc='A tool for Volume Management.' url=" arch=('x86_64' 'aarch64') license=('GPL2') depends=('libcurses' 'bind-tools' 'zlib' 'ncursesw') options=()
