I think I'm searching for the "best" way to explain the problem, but it's hard for me to know, seeing as how new to this sort of site/subject. What I'm trying to accomplish, if anyone can help, is to combine the best parts of popular media sharing sites with a powerful torrent client. It's rare for me to be able to download something for free, so combining this with a torrent client is the perfect solution for me. The problem is, when I try to download things from torrent clients, it downloads a compressed file with a.RAR extension, but when I try to unzip it, it fails. I'm just looking for the best way to explain the problem, because I think the easiest solution is the best (and a more effective solution). I suppose you could call it confusion between a.RAR and a.zip file. I've tried unzipping the.RAR files, and that fails just like the.zip files fail. I've tried to go into the.RAR files directly and see if the folder looks like one, because I think that would be the easiest solution. And I apologize for the long post. I promise I'll make less long posts in the future. A: Since you are using Windows, I would recommend using 7-Zip. 7-Zip has had a lot of improvements in the last few years, and I have had zero problems using it for working with RARs or ZIPs. It's certainly worth checking out. It's freeware, so you won't have to pay anything to use it. In general, there are three major types of conventional sunscreens for human use: (i) sunsc d0c515b9f4

The function takes a pointer to a pure virtual function of the class it gets the function from. This is how the code would look in the class: //pure virtual function of one class void getFunction(void (*getFunction)(void *)); //function that the class uses void *getValue(void ); And this is how the class itself would look class A { public: A(){}; A(void); virtual void doSomething(void ); void getValue(void); private: void (*getFunction)(void *) {0}; }; How would I create a mock function for a class like this? I want the getValue function to be mocked so when I call a method from that class I get a specific result, rather than undefined behavior. A: If you want to mock out the function getValue you're going to have to mock the whole class in which case the pattern

In other words, the maps loads but there is no map, the zoom button does not move. It just shows an empty box. Below is a jsfiddle where I was able to replicate this issue Link to the jsfiddle that shows the same issue You need to hit enter twice after loading the map. This is the standard behavior when you load a new window in jsfiddle. Once the map loads the first time, it becomes fixed in place. If you right click on the map, and choose Inspect element, you can see that the map is still there, with a DOM size that is too small If I load a map straight from google, everything works just fine. A: Just to close this out, there is nothing wrong in the code posted in the OP as it appears to be functioning as expected. This appears to be a bug in JSFiddle, which is a side issue, since the purpose of this post is to document an issue with loading Google Maps as an iframe. There are a couple things to
