"The real players' movements are the key to HyperMotion. This is technology that dramatically accelerates the action, and takes players to new dimensions of physicality,” said J. Allen Brack, executive vice president and co-owner of EA Sports. “This technology is the most exciting addition we have made in our history. It allows players to be much more aggressive in the way they move and control their game, as well as making the ability to gain and maintain momentum a whole new experience.” FIFA Soccer video game Evolving the series for the first time since its reboot in 2001,

EA Sports delivers a breakthrough in game design while maintaining the authentic balance between tactics, speed and talent that has long defined the series. HyperMotion Technology places a greater emphasis on true player direction and acceleration, while introducing moment-by-moment decision-making and reaction skills. It also gives players more control and makes skill mastery easier, allowing them to attack and defend their way to the top of the national rankings. EA SPORTS PROPHECY – The most accurate and authentic lineup of player likenesses ever seen in a console soccer game. In addition to new technical elements, game physics are improved, and ball control, speed and power are increased to deliver the most realistic gameplay experience on any console. New ways to play:

“Celebrate Football” – Take control of a whole team by creating a fluid, team-oriented relationship with the player experience, selecting tactics, then dictating the match pace. A card system creates a player’s profile, allowing you to see both what the player can and cannot do. By learning how to control the player with the in-game system, you create a unique player experience that can be further enhanced with items and team management. With over 2,500 items, the card system will provide you with the tools to customize your card-playing skills. Choose your tactics – By using the large variety of formations, teams can be organized into a greater number of tactical options, making the game more fluid and flexible. - * Multiple ways to score - take on your opponent and defeat them in big, big ways. Direct them from an onslaught of cross and shoot chances.

And goalkeepers don't get any cushy positioning – keeper dives and saves are more realistic than ever as players react the same way they do off the ball in real life. They instinctively dive off their line and take full-length saves.
- * Discover unique playmakers, based on club icon and famous names such as Maradona, Zidane, Messi and Ronaldo.
- * Partner up for explosive, collaborative attacks with additional team mates such as Diego and Dodô. Use them with your best striker, or dribble past players for a one-two before unleashing your blistering runs.

Q: Modifying Data Frame (Strings or NoNams) takes time when using `column.data.frame` function for large Data frame

I am trying to create a new variable for a Data frame, where the name of the variable is unique to each Data Frame object, and is based on column data.frame function, but only if the string in the column is not NA. If the string is NA, then I would like to fill those NAs with the names of the variables in one of the existing columns (I use this feature often for populating new columns). I do this with the following piece of code:

subsetDF[,isNA:=!is.na
